

Now is the Time to See Florida Best

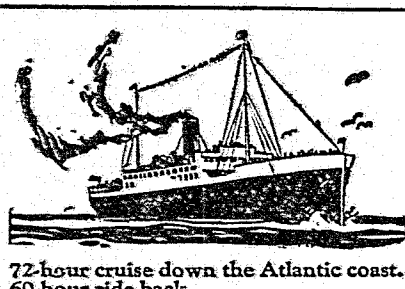

Hollywood-by-the-Sea has proved its claim of being Florida's All-year Resort City. Knowing that it is but necessary to visit its clean cool beach, we brought thousands, down to Hollywood and demonstrated it. These half-skeptical visitors from the northland found first of all, a modern city, made and in-the-making, built up by its founder, Joseph W. Young, from virgin land and timberland, right in the choicest section of Florida's brilliant Southeast Coast. Few of them were prepared to find such a community as Hollywood; a community that conventional ideas had taught them to believe was given over in summer to tropical heat.

They found beautiful, brilliantly lighted coral streets, parks and parkways, bright business structures, schools and public buildings. They found a livable city with all the amusements, pleasures, and comforts of a seaside resort.

hued villas, and finally its clean glistening beach, set with palm trees and graced with the most beautiful bathing casino in the United States.

This spacious, artistically designed and brilliantly colored bathing palace with large swimming pool, wading pool, and galleries for spectators looking out over the broad blue expanse of the Atlantic Ocean, is the rendezvous of this whole section of Florida. Here cool refreshing breezes rustle the fronds of the coconut palms. Here on holidays, thousands roll in the surf of the Atlantic, or idle on the silvery sand of the beach.

Hollywood is the gem of Florida's jewel shore. This wonderful Southeast Coast of Florida, in summer, autumn, winter, spring, is always the same in its charm of life; in its amusements, relaxations and restfulness.

Through Dangerous Seas

"LIKE most savages, Malays are very superstitious," began Captain Ira. "If they run into anything which they don't understand, their first impulse is to get away and hide from it. By that, I don't want you to think they are cowards. When it comes to physical bravery, there are no better men in the world than these same Malay pirates which you have asked about."

"Malay pirates," continued the Captain, "have built up a bad name for themselves. Some of their chiefs have been so powerful, and so dreaded, that the people of those parts spoke of them only in whispers, and that in fear and trembling. Strange things have happened. Men have gone away and have not been heard of again. Entire ships, crews and all, have vanished, leaving no trace."

"Knowing this you may be able to tell something of how I felt the first time I was taken to sea by those waters. I was a cabin-boy and general funkey aboard an old tramp sailor, the 'Blue-Nose Lucy'."

"This time we had been a long spell becalmed at sea, and the fresh water tanks were getting low. After talking it over with the two mates, our Captain decided to put in for water at one of the islands of the lower archipelago. This was done. Soon we lay at anchor near a great, wooded mountain, and in the lee of a sheltering island which partly closed the throat of the harbor."

"There was a Malay village across the bay from us, and to it the Captain made his way in our ship's long boat. I was taken with him, to carry a parcel up of things he meant to give the Malay chief in order to gain his good will. But we were received with scowls instead of smiles, and our gifts were scorned."

"It seems there had been several slight earthquake shocks felt in the village of late, and the natives were full of fear and distrust. After the Captain regained the ship, plans were made to send several boats—crews, with fresh-water casks, up the bay in search of water. This, though, was never done."

"About that time one of the deck watch spied a flotilla of war canoes putting out from the village and heading straight for us."

"In the carved prow of each canoe stood a stalwart Malay, ready with a boarding-ladder. Several of our crew, at sight of the oncoming horde, lay down behind the bulwarks with pistols ready and prepared to sell their lives as dearly as possible. 'It is hopeless to try and fight them,' said the Captain."

"It was a tense moment as the Malays, from all directions, began to swarm over the rail. Swarthy, turbaned heads, with eyes as deadly as white teeth, shot scores of glittering dirks. I thought myself as good as dead."

"Suddenly a great, wailing cry went up from the village. The Malay warriors stopped. One among them took up the cry. It leaped from man to man. They turned about. Over the rail they returned, back into the canoes, then paddled toward shore like furries."

"Soon we saw what they fled from. It was a great wall of water, taller than our ship, and with a side as steep almost as a house. It was a tidal wave."

"A moment later it hit us. We did not get the full force of it, for our island partly sheltered us. But our ship was torn from her moorings. We were engulfed and swept half across the bay. How the 'Blue-Nose Lucy' ever weathered it, I can't say. But she did, although four of our crew were washed overboard."

"The entire Malay canoe fleet was overwhelmed, and the survivors were few. It took a tremendously powerful swimmer to live in that wailing wall of water. Even the lower part of the village across the harbor was partly swept away."

"And now, boys," went on the Captain, "that shows what insane fear and distrust did to those savages. If the chances are that few of them would have been harmed by the tidal wave. They would have been home, taking their afternoon siestas, instead of on the sea. Fear and distrust always go hand in hand. Keep away from both. They can do you much harm."

OXFORD

Fore Street

Three empty houses on south end of this street and two more south of the Wilson Home and Smith places will be closed. Wednesday, Chestina Twitchell and Flora Cummings visited at E. T. Jenkins'. Thursday, Mrs. Twitchell motored to Skowhegan, 40 miles, and returned, bringing her mother, Mrs. E. E. Twitchell, with her, who has been with Melissa Twitchell Giles these last four weeks. Mrs. Giles and young daughter are gaining strength and we are hoping to see them here before winter sets in.

Arthur Merrill, who has been working in New Hampshire through the summer, has returned to E. E. Twitchell's. E. E. Twitchell, Mrs. E. E. Twitchell, Miss Chestina Twitchell, Flora Cummings, at Twitchell and family attended camp meeting at West Baldwin, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Twitchell and Flora Cummings were at West Falls, Friday evening, at a prayer meeting held at Mr. Powers'.

Welcome Home

Mrs. Mary Allen, Flora Cummings, Chestina Twitchell, Mrs. Will Twitchell, Marjorie Twitchell, Mrs. Mildred Twitchell, Mary Twitchell, Mrs. Arthur Talbot and Mrs. Ernest Talbot met at Mrs. Chas. Stanton's in honor of Mrs. Etta Harriman, who recently returned from California, with Miss Mayberry, who is staying at Stanton's.

Mrs. Cummings had a merry party of twelve, especially when it was discovered that the day was also Mrs. Cummings' birthday anniversary. Mrs. Mildred Twitchell had Mrs. Cummings with her as a dinner guest, serving ice cream and birthday cake with her. Mrs. Cummings had a lovely bouquet of sweets, cards, and three books, much to Mrs. Cummings' surprise, as the gathering was supposed to be entirely in honor of Mrs. Harriman, but the custom of observing the birthdays, held good and made the afternoon pass even jollier. Refreshments of ice cream and fancy crackers were served, and work and music on the victrola enjoyed; a reading of the poem listened to, much social chat interchanged and finally the party broke up, leaving their best wishes with Mrs. Harriman and many thanks to Mrs. Stanton for making all this possible.

Mrs. Mary Allen accompanied Miss Chestina Twitchell to Mechanic Falls, Saturday, on a business trip. A stray hound, dark brown, lame in left front leg, is wandering about here. It has a collar, but no name on it. The dog is foot sore and weary, by appearances, and nowhere to go.

Among those going to Lewiston are Mr. and Mrs. Freeland Cummings and Alvin Lovejoy.

Miss Chestina Twitchell started her fourth year in Norway High, Tuesday, boarding at home, going to and from school in her Ford.

Since writing that the Keller house was closed, I see a wash out on the line in the door yard, so seemingly I'm wrong again.

The rain we have had, though light, was very welcome. We notice that the crops on this street compare very favorably with those on high lands as to growth, and well indeed as to frost as Back street and some fields toward West Paris are dead, while the crops here still live and ripen.

NORWAY VICINITY

About Town

It is noticed, with great satisfaction, that when a check is cashed at the National Bank, clean, new bills are obtained. Around Washington no one sees any dirty. There should not be any in circulation. It is also noted how well the public is served by Fred B. Smith and Percy Y. Fogg—able and fine young men.

The members of the Norway and Paris Band, under the leadership of Frank Knapp, are a splendid company of musicians. Every one fills his particular place to perfection. They never pleased a Norway audience better than Monday evening at the Opera House. Old Kentucky Home, and Old Black Joe are old, old tunes, but they will never cease to thrill the heart.

The Governor and his lady made good impressions at the meeting Monday evening. It was their first appearance before a Norway audience. He, though not a spread eagle orator, dealing in platitudes, has something of moment to say and impresses one with his sincerity and ability to accomplish such for the people and the state. He will grow in public favor and future honors await. Keep your eye on Governor Brewster.

The little things in life are those that count. A cheerful countenance, a smile, a pleasant word, are of great account in our intercourse with others. Besides, they are some of the highest accomplishments of a real gentleman or lady. We are often troubled to find many little things that add to our comfort. In the days of the old country store, one could find about everything needed, now it is different, unless one is within reach of a department store. Wishing to obtain a certain small article, after much hunting, it was obtained at Leavitt's. A hunt after another small thing, brought me around to the same place. A third time, though not expecting to get it, as it was somewhat off the regular list of merchandise kept there, a bee line was made for the store, and surprise and pleasure, the article desired was obtained. At this point in my story, the writer was interrupted by the lady of the household asking what was being written about, and upon being informed, said, "Oh, one could get all the little things required in the household, at Mrs. Ridlon's."

"No doubt of it," was the reply, "but one couldn't get a 'T. D. pipe'."

"A clay pipe! What in mercy's name would you want of that?"

"To smoke cubes, mullen leaves and sweet fern for the catarrh."

"That may do, but you couldn't procure a night-cap at Leavitt's, could you?"

"With my experience, I wouldn't dare bet I couldn't, but anyhow I would bet that he would know where it could be had."

Another matter has been made a subject of reflection and worthy of mention here. A lady of one of the first families, left home alone and thrown upon her earnings and slender income for living, became worried over an investment, where the payment of a dividend had been stopped for a time. The pastor of her church interested himself in her behalf and did what he could to help her. A case of sickness among the lowly in his parish brought the tender ministrations of himself and his good wife. Another wished to buy a home for his little family, and at once the minister interested himself towards raising the money to make the first payment. A worthy member of his flock desiring to obtain a position to assist him to rise in the world. The minister is on hand to help him obtain the required influence to begin with. Is it any wonder that this able preacher of the gospel, splendid citizen, and thoroughly good man, is loved by, and strong with, his people?—has no dissensions in his church and large congregations to hear what he has to say to them?

—C. F. Whitman.

AILMENTS OF YOUNG GIRLS

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound School Teacher's Experience

Evansville, Wyoming—"A few years ago I had troubles every month such as girls often have, and would suffer awfully every time. I was teaching school and it made it hard for me as I had to go to bed for two or three days. One day my mother suggested that I take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it did wonders for me. In the course of a year I married and after my first baby was born I got up too soon and it caused a complaint. This troubled me so that I could hardly walk or do my housework. I knew what the Vegetable Compound did for me before so I took it again. It strengthened me and now I have five little kiddies. The eldest is six, the baby is five months old and I have twin boys three years old and a boy of five years. I do all my own housework, washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I owe my health to your wonderful medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

Our Presidents

Our Presidents many, were wise and great, And were always striving on to their fate, With a will of the lion, And a soul like God.

First came General Washington, Who fought to the end and his battles won, That we today might all be free, And helped us our duties, to ever see.

Next in line came one of great fame, Who is known to us all as John Adams by name, Who acted as a very strong superintendent, So that we all might be independent.

Then to Thomas Jefferson we were introduced, And he soon sent all the slavers to roost; As he was a man of great ambition, And needed men to fulfill his missions.

Then came Madison with great ability, Who ran our government with much nobility; And showed Old England in eighteen-twelve, How he managed affairs, so that they never fell.

Monroe was a man of Scotch descent, A man who, on his way, was terribly bent; But he showed the world a thing or two, And everyone said that he would do.

Next came Adams, John Quincy by name, Who never intended for the nation to go lame, While he had the power, the strength, and the will.

To insure the passing of any bill, Next came Jackson with eyes of gray, Who always, without fighting, had his say, For if over his eyes shined a bit of fire, Everything went well with the biggest liar.

For of him everyone was greatly afraid, So they all kept still, and they never said, To see another take the throne, That Jackson, the hills and woods might roam.

Next came Mr. Martin Van Buren, Who strove to keep the nation from ruin, While he had the reins in his feeble hands, They were faithfully protected from all rebel bands.

We must now bow our heads to a man from the west, Who is always fighting, and never at rest; As over the line walks General Harrison, Who for years has been at the head of hisarrison.

Next in line comes Mr. Tyler, Who, as a boy, was never a warrior, But one of a nature more gentle and calm, Who liked to work and roan on the farm.

Many a person liked James K. Polk, Who had always much rather take will, Than luss in his brain over Government affairs, Or in the Great Ship seek to make repairs.

Zachary Taylor was a man very brave, Whose object was his country to save, Many a time has he put to flight, A wild-armed red man, who wanted to fight.

Millard Fillmore had a mind which said "Never Retreat," Which was so firm, and brave, and true, That he, the Whigs were able to defeat, And his work, he was able to see through.

Loyal man was Franklin Pierce, Whom everyone thought was something fierce; But just the same he held his ground, Until the end of his office came around.

James Buchanan did not meet with success, We must the best we must confess, He did his best to help us all, Therefore we should save him from a greater fall.

Abraham Lincoln was loved by all, Man and woman, great and small; "I must give the black men freedom," he said, And soon after, in a theatre, he met his fate.

But he had given the slaves emancipation, Which have helped to save the nation, And people this day remember him still, As they watch another, his place strive to fill.

Andrew Johnson took his place, But soon disaster looked him in the face, For he violated a law, was tried, and found guilty, Though he fought till the end with the best of his ability.

He then was impeached, But his soul was not reached, So he went quietly, and he died, Hoping to see a brighter dawn.

Mr. Grant, a man from the South, Who was stoutly built, and fought with a mouth, Filled his place, both well and long, And soon America sang another song.

Next in order came Rutherford Hayes, Who, with his numerous, funny ways, Finished the work President Grant began, And always had time for some kind of fun.

James A. Garfield was watched by the world, As the king of his country he duly unfurled, As a man of power, intelligence and attainment, He made, while in office, a great many arrangements.

Which his exceptional powers had helped him to make, Until Gailbreath, his life was passed to take, Then came Chester Arthur, great and strong, To take his place, mid a sorrowful throng.

As we near the end, he continued the plans, As Garfield had made with his own hands, After him, came Grover Cleveland, Who met with success on every hand; Two terms he served, this ship of state, Across the tide at a glorious rate.

Benjamin Harrison came next in line, And ran all his days, down to the end, He ran a race with Mr. Cleveland, And had to give up to the opposite band.

Then came McKinley, calm and true, Who tried to make our troubles seem few, For he governed a war, and won with success, And America, with honors, he was able to bless.

But we could not always keep him, For Cooks had to come to a kin, Which would separate him, and his nation, But his memory would be forgotten, never.

Roosevelt, stalwart, firm and great, Came to save America from a sorrowful fate, For he seized the reins and things had to go, Always to glory, and never to woe.

Taft, happy, jolly, and good, We have with us yet 'till he is old in manhood, And even now, he likes to watch, The games and battles of General Foch.

Tobey and the Bear

L. J. Ames, of Locke's Mills, possesses a very old scrap book. Among the interesting things in this collection of poems, anecdotes, etc., is a bear story written by the late Dr. W. P. Lapham.

Noah Tobey, the hero, was Mr. Ames' grandfather, and 18 years of age at the time of the fight.

The story taken from the scrap book is given in full. Mr. Ames suggests two corrections, first, the Noah Tobey settled in Greenwood prior to 1811, which is the date he moved into his farm house; secondly, he had three sons and four daughters.

The thrilling adventure follows: Noah Tobey was one of the early settlers of Greenwood. He came into town in 1811 and took up a farm in the western part of the town, through which the old west country road was afterward built. Here he lived for many years, and here he died.

The old west country road was long ago discontinued as a public thoroughfare, and the old Tobey farm, since his death, has grown up to bushes and weeds, and we are not certain that the house where he lived and reared a family, is still standing.

Mr. Ames, an eccentric man, and we have heard many stories of his peculiar traits and habits, in our boyhood days. He was born at Kittery Point, in the year 1768 and lived there until he was fourteen years of age, when he was apprenticed to a master builder in the town of Topsham, by the name of Trueworthy.

It was an incident that happened during the years of his apprenticeship, that we propose to relate. The towns of Brunswick and Topsham presented a very different appearance ninety years ago, from what they now do. There were small settlements there then, and the mills at the falls; Bowdoin College had not then been chartered, and much of the territory north of the now thriving villages of Topsham and Brunswick, was covered with forests, where bears, wolves, and other wild beasts were often found.

Young Tobey frequently expressed a desire to see a wild bear, and often boasted of his fellow apprentices that if he should chance to meet one, he would not run from him, but would fight him, if the bear would give him an opportunity.

Probably this was mere idle talk, and doubtless Tobey had no expectation that his boasted courage would so soon be put to the test.

A short time after this as he was returning home from Brunswick—we have heard it said that it was Monday morning, and he was returning to work—he passed through a piece of woods, and as he came to the top of a short but steep hill, he was confronted by a large bear, which stood in the narrow path, directly before him. The white-faced bear is always ready to fight, and in this instance immediately stood up on his hind legs, and with open mouth and flashing eyes, advanced toward Tobey, who at the moment stood spellbound with astonishment and fear.

He soon rallied however and took in the situation in a moment. He must either turn and run, in which case he felt quite certain that he would pursue and overtake him, or he must accept the challenge and fight the bear in his own way. Tobey was a young man, spry and agile as a young panther. So he sprang toward the bear, which was doubtless somewhat of his guard by this unexpected movement on the part of Tobey, and they fell together to the earth, the latter falling underneath. Tobey immediately rolled and the bear followed him, when he was thrown again, and the third time in the same manner. At the fourth round the bear threw Tobey, and to let him bear down, placing his huge paw on the wrist, between the elbow and the wrist in such a manner as to lacerate the muscles of the left arm and forearm, and lunged down over his wrist. In the struggle they were all torn and injured, and the muscles of the left arm and forearm, and lunged down over his wrist. In the struggle they were all torn and injured, and the muscles of the left arm and forearm, and lunged down over his wrist.

In 1789, Mr. Tobey was married to Miss Abigail Gilpatrick, of Biddeford, and as we have before stated, went to Greenwood in 1811. His children consisted of one son, who died several years ago, and of several daughters still living. Mr. Tobey died in 1849. After he became an old man, he frequently related his adventure with the bear, and always boasted that when he and the bear rolled down the hill, he was "top half the time."

(This paper was read before Paris Grange in 1890); remarks by Quimby Perham, who spoke on the hopefulness of the farmer, and events in the history of the grange; singing, grange.

The annual dinner was served at the Waterford, Oct. 6, when the 50th anniversary will be observed. There will be no degree work on that date, but the State Grange will be present, together with speakers of note. Maine Booklet

One of the latest and most timely booklets yet to be published, is the State Development of Agricultural Industries, titled "Opportunities in Maine."

In concise form it shows the unusual opportunities that the state holds for the farmer now in the state and for the opening up of new and abandoned farms.

The booklet coming at a time when recently compiled statistics in the New England States shows that there is a definite trend toward New England of the farming interests throughout the country as economic conditions improve outlook for profitable farming industry.

The statistics clearly show that there is a definite "Back to East" farm movement by men who went out of New England years ago or by their sons who have tried farming in other places and have decided that the nearness to the excellent markets of New England and the high standard of living which prevails here are factors in their success.

The booklet "Opportunities in Maine" shows clearly through that all of the New England States, that Maine is far in the lead of the rest of the country in prospective opportunities due to the geological formation of its soil which is adaptable to growing a greater multitude of crops than any section of the country.

It is published by the Boy Scout Service of one of the best of the country's pages. From cover to cover it is brimful of information and clearly sets forth the opportunities of the farmer in the various agricultural industries of the state.

It is so prepared, that the front and back pages unfold enabling the reproduction of one of the finest panoramas of the world's largest potato fields up in Aroostook that has yet been published. The front and back pages contain a blank map of Maine, done in green, titled "Opportunities in Maine" with the stamp official beneath it.

It contains thirty-two excellent illustrations on the various industries, which were assembled by Charles M. White, Chief of the Bureau of Markets, and are the best yet seen in any publication of this nature.

The facts contained in the booklet can well be read by every citizen of Maine. For instance, for those who think the Boston market alone requires annually 170 million quarts of milk, 19 million and half of animals for local slaughter, 65 million eggs and 55 thousand carloads of all kinds of fruits and vegetables. This and many other markets all within serving distance of Maine farmers.

How many citizens of the state realize that the per-acre yield of potatoes in Maine is 80.50 as against 124.2 as compared with United States buckwheat 26.0 against 19.6 and oats 37 as against 31.9 for the rest of the country.

Other interesting facts set forth in the booklet are: There are practically two million acres of improved land in Maine, the average value of land and buildings is $4,232 per farm with average acreage of 112.5 as compared with the whole United States of 148.2 acres per farm with value for land and buildings of $10,284.

More farms are free from debt in Maine than in the whole country. Savings bank accounts show $348.00 per farm as compared with $805.00 for the Middle Atlantic States $168.00 for the East Central and $186.00 for the country as a whole.

Ninety-two per cent. of the farms in Maine are occupied by the owners and 90 per cent. of all the farmers are native born Americans.

An interesting feature of the booklet is an illustrated map of the State showing its adaptability of crops and live stock. A key that goes with the map shows the relative values in each county. The booklet is one that can be read with pride by every resident of the state and clearly shows the opportunities that the state holds along agricultural lines.

Grasping Your Opportunities

The leadership in every community consists of men who recognized their opportunities and took full advantage of them.

Those who complain that they never had a chance never were unable to discern it when it passed. They were looking in some distant place when it may have been within their feet.

Will Rogers, famous cowboy comedian and humorist writer, was quick to see his opportunities or he would still be an obscure performer in a wild west show.

His former employer relates that the show was playing in Madison Square Garden, New York. A wild steer broke loose during the performance and rushed madly in the direction of the audience. Rogers lassoed the steer and prevented a panic. It was his opportunity and he was not slow in recognizing it.

The night Rogers got a big ovation when he appeared for his last swinging act and a vaudeville booking agent, happening in at the moment, thought it was his act that won the applause. Rogers got a vaudeville contract, but he still had to make good.

His cowboy buddies went the first night and "whooped 'er up" for him, but he could not afford to carry a crowd of clappers. His chances were small, when, one night, his foot was entangled in his lariat and he remarked that he would rather have the rope around his legs than around his neck.

The dry humor of the remark and the way it appealed to the audience was turning point for Rogers. He is now nationally known as a humorist through his newspaper writings.

The big opportunity comes to everyone. Poor judgment, lack of vision and confidence, fear of work are the walls that keep many of us in a narrow life circle.

If we can recognize our opportunities and make the most of them, we should not blame them on to others or bad luck.

One-Profits Value Unit-Built Construction

Make Studebakers Bargains in Quality

BECAUSE Studebaker builds for Studebaker cars all bodies, all engines, all axles, chassis, differentials, steering gear, springs, gear box, gray iron castings and drop forgings—it is possible to give purchasers two advantages:

1. A price advantage. Because Studebaker eliminates extra profits which all other manufacturers (except Ford) must pay to outside parts or body makers. Thus Studebaker is able to use steel of extra toughness, fine northern white ash and hard maple, wool upholstery, plate glass, painstaking workmanship to precision standards, and extra equipment, such as gasoline gauge, clock, stop light, etc.—yet charge no more than competing cars.

2. A construction advantage. Because all parts are not only designed to constitute one harmonious unit, but are Unit-Built in Studebaker plants. Using built as a unit, every Studebaker functions as a unit. This results in years longer life, scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation, greater riding comfort, minimum repair costs and, finally, higher resale value.

The net of it is this: the one-profit Studebaker with its unit-built construction offers you a bargain in quality.

There are others in our general price field who also build quality cars. But for models that are at all comparable their prices are higher.

Others, who once built quality cars, have made material sacrifice in order to secure superficial price advantages. These cars are good value for the man or woman who wants that kind of a car. But if he wants a bargain in quality there is only one answer—Studebaker.

Consider, for instance, the Standard Six Coach, illustrated above. It has wool upholstery; safety glass; fine trim to hide all ticks; heavy, ornamental hardware; clock; gasoline gauge on dash; automatic windshield cleaner; stop light; locks on ignition; steering gear, door and spare tire carrier all operated by a single key.

Slam the door and the sound says "quality." Swing on the door. Run one wheel up on the curb and note how the door itself opens and closes. Sit on the firm, heavy fenders. Try the steering gear. See how easily it handles the full-size balloon tires. Test the comfort of the deep rear seat. Its genuine wool upholstery covers two layers of washed, quilted cotton, one layer of genuine curled hair and extra long springs closely held together by small coil springs.

Run the engine—the most powerful in any car of this size and weight, according to the ratings of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Come in and see this bargain in quality—the lowered price car ever sold by Studebaker.

Plants for the Lawn

In the choice of plants for the lawn, says an expert in that line of home and city beautification, a few special rules are of interest and value. Choose hardy plants. Use dogwoods, honeysuckles, spruces, minkbark, etc., for shrubs; woodbine, Dutchman pipe, honeysuckle, clematis, for vines, and hardy perennial flowers for the borders, then add maples, spruces, elms, etc., in suitable places to complete the plan. Plant in the spring rather than in the fall.

PROPOSED BRIDGE

NEEDED LINK FOR A MAINE HIGHWAY

Tolls Will Pay Costs of Structure Across Kennebec River

WILL NOT ADD A PENNY TO TAXES

Maine to Vote on the Bridge Question Next

SALIENT FACTS REGARDING BRIDGE AT BATH It is to be a toll bridge. It cannot cost more than $3,000,000. It will eliminate operating the State ferry.

It will eliminate the building of new boats and replacing slips in the near future at a great cost to the State.

Being a toll bridge, its receipts will pay interest charges, maintenance and retire the bonds as they become due.

It will not add one penny to the tax of any citizen of Maine and it will keep open 24 hours daily a link in the State highway now closed 12 to 18 hours per day depending on the season of the year, during the hours the ferries are not operating.

On September 14, next Monday, the voters of Maine will go to the polls and vote upon three measures:

A bond issue of $6,000,000 for continuing the work on Maine's present system of State highways so well begun.

The granting to Dexter P. Cooper and his associates, the rights, so far as Maine can grant them, to build a giant power station at Passamaquoddy Bay, at a cost of nearly, if not quite, $100,000,000, with the State of Maine will not be asked to finance in any way.

A bond issue, not to exceed $3,000,000 for building a toll bridge across the Kennebec River at Bath which, as Governor Brewster in his recent speech at Rockland said, "the bridge will pay for itself in a much shorter time than was contemplated in the figures which the Legislature considered last winter."

Those who live in the coast counties, and those from the more inland counties whose business takes them to that section of Maine, know the need of a bridge at Bath.

These people, who know the conditions as they exist, do not need to be told why there is such a demand for this bridge. But there are many who do not know these facts. They do not know that from midnight to six in the morning, even in the summer, there is no ferry operating. They do not know that for many months in the year there is no ferry between six at night and six in the morning.

They do not realize that this great State highway is closed to travel 12 to 18 hours out of every 24, according to the season, so that to get across in a car one must travel 29 miles up the river to the bridge at Gardiner. If they did realize this condition, and if they would consider what they would want Maine to do for them if a stretch of their own highway was closed this way, there would not be a "No" vote cast on this matter in the State of Maine next Monday.

Some labor under the impression that this bridge will be a burden to the State or increase their taxes. This is absolutely not so. The tolls from patrons, with the rental to be paid by the State Central Railroad, and receipts from other corporations such as water and electric power and light, will amply care for the cost of the bridge and its maintenance.

With the State cut in two at such a point it is almost impossible to develop the great stretch of territory between the coast as it should be. Where there are hundreds of summer homes and camps there should be thousands of permanent homes. There should be a great industrial district and a prosperous agricultural industry carried on. While there should be a great Central Railroad, and receipts from other corporations such as water and electric power and light, will amply care for the cost of the bridge and its maintenance.

YES

Say Neighbor:

When you go to the polls on Sept. 14, will you mark a cross in the "Yes" square over the referendum question regarding the bond issue for a bridge across the Kennebec river at Bath?

This will be a toll bridge and as Governor Brewster said in his recent Rockland speech:

"THESE FIGURES ALSO INDICATE SO MUCH THE MORE FORCEFULLY THE NEED OF A BRIDGE ACROSS THE KENNEBEC AT BATH AND ALSO THE ASSURANCE THAT THE BRIDGE WILL PAY FOR ITSELF IN A MUCH SHORTER TIME THAN WAS CONTEMPLATED IN THE FIGURES WHICH THE LEGISLATURE CONSIDERED LAST WINTER."

NOTE THE FACT that it is a TOLL BRIDGE and as the Governor says "WILL PAY FOR ITSELF." Tolls and receipts will pay interest charges, maintenance and retire the bonds at maturity. Help us eliminate the obsolete ferries with their vexatious delays and to keep the Atlantic Highway open 24 hours a day instead of 12 to 18, as now, depending upon the season.

IT WILL NOT ADD A PENNY TO YOUR TAX. WILL YOU HELP?
